Our City Comment & discussion

by THOMAS D.
WATSON

Injunction
Hearing Is Again
Continued on Demurrer

WORD has just come in from Los Angeles over the Associated Press wire that another postponement had been granted in the injunction suit brought by Geo. A. Montgomery against the city council of Glendale. This suit was brought to enjoin the city council from paying any more money on the recent contracts to purchase tracts for park purposes.

Glendale citizens are anxious that this question be answered, but in as much as this suit has been brought they want the question answered in a legal way. The city attorney claims that he anticipates no trouble in having the temporary injunction set aside, while the attorney for the plaintiff claims the purchases to be contrary to the state constitution.

THE people want to know which is correct, but they want the judge to tell them. Arguments for and against the demurrer taken by the city will be held tomorrow at 2 o'clock in the superior court. If demurrer is denied the case will come up for final decision on March 22.

THE Glendale postoffice is experiencing the same trouble that the city schools have. Heavy increase in receipts and slight improvement in facilities. Increase in receipts and business of the local postoffice during the last year amounted to 50 per cent and the growth so far this year has kept up to this record. A great deal of pressure has been brought to bear on the postoffice department at Washington to secure additional facilities and an increase in the regular force. At the present time an auxiliary force has been used to keep the business from going behind.

IN face of the urgent demand for better service a communication was today received by Postmaster Jackson from Washington, D. C., which suggested that the carrier service and clerk hire would have to be cut for the balance of the fiscal year, which ends July 1, the department claiming that the postoffice appropriation is almost depleted.

If this cut is permitted to go into effect it will be disastrous to the business interests of Glendale, for it means that six auxiliary clerks will have to be laid off at once and in addition, on April 1 the services of 13 carriers will have to be dispensed with. The reducing of the Glendale postoffice force means that deliveries in business districts will be cut from three to one a day and only one delivery in the residence districts will be possible.

SUFFICIENT pressure must be brought to bear on the postoffice officials at Washington to keep them from making this cut for the service at the present time, through lack of facilities, is a long way from being efficient.

There are sections of Glendale now that get mail through the Burbank postoffice. This is poor advertising, to say the least. We would suggest that a protest, loud enough to be heard, be registered through our representative in Washington, against this cut of a force already inadequate to handle the business.

BUSINESS WOMEN TO HAVE SESSION TUESDAY

The regular monthly supper, followed by a business session, will be held by the Glendale Business and Professional Women's club Tuesday evening at the clubhouse at 126 South Maryland avenue at 8:15.

Mrs. Hobb will head the list of hostesses, all newly elected members of the club, and a jolly time is predicted.

At the business meeting reports will be submitted and matter of great importance to the organization will be discussed.

Every member is expected to wear her club button, if she has one, or to place an order for it, that this method of making the members acquainted with each other may be effective.

There will probably be a few minutes' drill in the fundamentals of parliamentary law, and opportunity for social chat. It is hoped every member will be there, particularly the new ones.

FIELD RECORD OF OXY BROKEN BY NICK CARTER

Does the Mile in 4:29 2-5
in Meet With Pomona

The mile field record which has stood at Occidental college since 1914, was broken by Nick Carter of Occidental, in Saturday's conference meet with Pomona on Patterson field. Carter was timed at 4:29 2-5, and finished well ahead of Handley, Pomona's star miler. The feature of the day was the last relay race, which decided the meet. Cliff Argue, Occidental captain, was high point man with 21 points. He placed first in the hundred yard dash, with the official clock ticking him off at ten seconds flat. During this race, Tony Spangler, the Tiger's best point gainer, pulled a tendon in his leg and was carried off the field. Although this is the second injury of the kind that he has suffered this season, it is expected that he will recover in time for the conference meet which takes place next Saturday, at Pomona college. Occidental, Pomona, Redlands, Whittier, Southern Branch, and Cal-Tech will participate in this event. Pomona looks forward for revenge.

The time and distances were good in all events Saturday, and an unusually large crowd turned out for the meet.

Stanford Glee Club to Give Concert at Tuesday Clubhouse

Another musical treat in the form of a concert to be given by the Stanford Glee Club of over 50 members will take place the evening of April 2, at the new Tuesday Afternoon clubhouse under the auspices of the Central Avenue Parent-Teachers' association, of which Mrs. D. F. Reichard is president. The latter would like to have any Stanford people or their friends get in touch with her at Glen, 1883-R. The Tuesday Afternoon club is contemplating giving a dance at the clubhouse following the glee club entertainment, at which the members of the latter organization would be guests of honor, according to Mrs. Reichard.

Ask Suggestions on Glendale Boost

The advertising committee of the Chamber of Commerce, of which Mr. Twining is chairman, and the publicity committee of which Mr. McCormick is chairman, are united in a scheme to ask members of the chamber to send in suggestions for the advertising of Glendale. Mr. Twining says they already have a large pile of letters which they have not been able to consider in detail but which from a superficial examination reveal many excellent ideas. The committee plans to use this material in mapping out a campaign to advertise Glendale throughout the eastern section of the country.

GLENDALÉ POST HAS POPULAR DANCE

Funds Are Considerably
Increased by the Monthly Event

The treasury funds of Glendale Post of the American Legion were again increased by the proceeds from the regular monthly dance, which was held in the Legion hall, at 610 East Broadway, Saturday night. The customary spirit of good fellowship, evidenced by all the Legion dances, prevailed, making the dance a most enjoyable one for the more than seventy-five couples present. Arrangements were in charge of L. G. Fortier, chairman, who staged several lucky dances, for which boxes of candy were awarded, and also other features.

Mrs. G. Kaeding, president of the women's auxiliary of the Legion, disposed of a cut steel beaded amulet and also some hand-painted Easter cards for the benefit of disabled veterans. The proceeds from the dance given last month by the Legion were used to improve the present quarters. The walls of the hall have been recalcined, an electrically lighted American Legion sign placed at the entrance to the hallway, and new pictures of Washington and Lincoln purchased.

Mr. Fortier announced a dance to be given St. Patrick's night, Saturday, March 17, by N. P. Banks Camp No. 22, Sons of Veterans, and Ladies' Auxiliary No. 7 at the American Legion hall, beginning at 8 o'clock. Kelley's Shrine Club orchestra will play. Tickets are 50 cents each or a dollar a couple.

FEDERAL OFFICERS ON BOOTLEGGER'S PATRONS' LIST

Prohibition Officials to Investigate Liquor of Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Prohibition officials themselves must take whatever action appears necessary in connection with the discovery in a recent bootleg raid of a list of Washington residents, which included the names of several officials of the state department and of 50 officers of the army, navy and marine corps, it was announced today.

The list, as published today in the Washington Post, contains more than 400 names and was seized in a raid on the home of James M. Connor, arrested upon the charge of illegal possession and selling of liquor after the confiscation of liquors valued at $4000.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON ON CLUB WOMEN PREPARE FOR BIG HOUSEWARMING

Officers and Committees Give Demonstration of Devotion to the Cause of the Organized Women of Glendale in Preparing for Tomorrow Night

By GERTRUDE GIBBS

Glendale is having a wonderful demonstration of altruism in the behavior of the women who have been active as officers or heads of committees in connection with the building of this new club home. Personal considerations have been forgotten in the work of making it ready for the housewarming which will have its climax Tuesday evening when the husbands, brothers, sweethearts will be welcomed and entertained with a special program upon which the drama and music sections have been at work for weeks and which will include a pageant of the fair and wise women of history.

Saturday afternoon workmen were still busy installing lamps in electric light fixtures and doing the hundred and one last final mechanical details.

Members of the board of directors were present, sweeping, dusting, planning floral decorations, checking bills and making themselves useful in a variety of ways which all converged toward the public opening, workmen upon the grounds being busy toward the same end.

The central fact which impressed the visitor apart from the beauty and completeness of the building was the unexpected extent to which it has been furnished, and with pieces that are worthy the setting and not makeshifts. This is due chiefly to the tireless work of the ways and means committee under Mrs. A. H. Montgomery, first vice president; to Mrs. W. E. Evans, chairman of the house furnishing committee, and to the generous members and friends of the club who bestowed gifts.

The immediate requirements of the building left only $5852 available for the house furnishing committee. It was estimated that $12,000 to $15,000 would be needed. Mrs. Montgomery undertook to raise $1500 for the fund, and succeeded, but the sum total, $7352, has been spent so carefully and judiciously that it has been made to include not alone the carpeting and furniture, supplemented by the gifts referred to, which will be duly acknowledged from the platform of the auditorium Tuesday night, by Mrs. Daniel Campbell, the president, but also the beautiful blue velvet curtains at the four French doors of the lounge. Every section of Glendale has great reason to be proud of this lovely building, designed by our own citizen, Architect Alfred Priest, and though all Glendale has contributed indirectly to its building, the dream realized is such an achievement that every citizen will wish he or she had participated more.

NIGHT SCHOOL ENROLLMENT NEARS 1000

A. L. Ferguson Reports
Passing the 900 Mark
with Increase Coming

A. L. Ferguson, principal of the night school at Glendale high, reports that enrollment has passed the 900 mark with every prospect that it will considerably exceed the 1000 mark before school ends.

This is the more satisfactory, he says, because reports from other schools in many cases record the abandonment of courses started because of the lack of patronage and regular attendance.

One of the most important and interesting courses here has been the Americanization course to take care of the local people who are making application for naturalization papers, and a small group of persons learning the language.

The first class which took this work were given a written statement of the work they had done in the night school which was presented to the federal court. As a result they were passed without examination, the fame of Glendale's night school being sufficient to justify such recognition by the federal authorities.

"THE END OF THE WORLD," SUBJECT OF REV. KRINGEL

Rev. Henry O. Kringel, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, chose for his theme in his sermon: "The End of the World," taken from 2 Peter, 3: 3-14. In the sermon he dwelt on the creation and also the end of the world as seen in Holy Scriptures. A large audience was present. The speaker said in part: "The first article of the Holy Christian faith confesses God, the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth. It declares God the Creator of heaven and earth. He has made all things by the power of His word. Only to the believer is this comprehensible. Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear. 'The believer, then, with awe and admiration over the grandeur thereof, turns to the Scriptural record of this grand event. The first chapter of the Bible is given to this subject of divine power and begins with the inspiring statement: 'In the beginning God created heaven and earth.'"

"When nothing was, neither heaven nor earth, neither space nor universe, God, the eternal One, was; and in eternity, He chose a time for His creation, and that was the beginning—the beginning of time and all things governed by it. Thus heaven and earth came to be. Majestic and dazzling are they: The heavens starred and decked with planets, with moon and sun, paralyzing man's view with their number and brightness; the earth, the bride of heaven, arrayed in the loveliness and freshness of youth—a just companion of heaven—both a beautiful work. "Our heart is filled while following the description of Creation. We hear that the earth is void and empty, without shape or form—a chaotic mass, devoid of order; and impenetrable darkness lies brooding over the deep. From this state we see heaven and earth created with fixed laws to govern them. God is present. His Spirit moves over this mass and with a powerful word He says: 'Let there be light!' Darkness is swept away by omnipotent power—there was light, the work of the first day. "He then makes a vast expanse between the waters, dividing the waters above the expanse from the waters beneath the expanse, placing a vast distance between them. The waters are gathered into basins and the dry land appears, which He clothes with grass and herbs and beautifies with flowers and trees. He now forms sun, moon and stars. They are the orbs that are to shine upon the earth and give life and growth to everything that grows. The waters are filled with all manner of fish, and the air with fowls, while the earth is populated with large and small animals. "Finally, as the crowning work of Creation, the Lord makes man in His own image: in His likeness He creates them, male and female. They are wonders in themselves. He reviews what He has made, and finds it all very good, no fault or the like in it—the acme of perfection itself. Though ruined through man's disobedience and polluted by man's sins, there are vestiges of the former beauty in which the earth was adorned. As a pearl of glittering clearness it rolled out of the Master's hands. Lovely heaven and lovely earth, we have the Creator's record of thy birth. Let us today hear of thy death. Thou camest forth out of nothing, and thou shalt go again into nothing. Nothing was thy cradle and nothing will be thy grave. Our text, 2 Peter, 3: 3-14, treats of the end of the world. May the Spirit, that once moved upon the deep move our hearts while considering this subject."

The speaker then depicted the signs and destruction of the world and also the lessons we are to receive therefrom. He said: "Let us learn the object and reason of the Lord's seeming tarrying. The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but desiring that all should come to repentance and faith in Jesus Christ, as the only way into life everlasting. We frequently hear people criticizing divine truth, and see them picking at it with their fine fingers, endeavoring to ruin it, like the disobedient child does the flower, tearing leaf after leaf away until nothing remains. Where is their gratitude for all the blessings of God? In the days of the flood it was similar. Wickedness waxed strong upon the earth, yet the Lord had patience. He waited 120 years before the deluge came. The people, perhaps, called it slackness. It was true patience. But He waited in vain. They repented not, but continued in their wickedness. May all the people set their affections on the things above and profit by their example. Let us be strong in the faith and do according to Christ's command: 'Watch, therefore!'"

The spider is seldom in danger when his life is hanging by a thread.

ADDRESS BEFORE MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

The following was the address before the Men's Bible Class at the City Hall yesterday. In the third chapter of 2d Thessalonians the Apostle Paul turns from one of the most interesting subjects in Christian thought, the course and end of this present age, to deal with minor questions of interest to a young church. He begins by exhorting that the Christians of Thessalonica should pray for him, that the word which he preached might have free course and be glorified. Remember that this is an apostle, a man of unusual spiritual experience, a man who had been brought very near to God, who makes this request. This man's letters are full of pleas that even young converts may pray for him. Prayer is an office which the youngest believers can exercise to the spread and the power of the gospel. Do you pray for your pastor, that the gospel might be honored in the salvation of souls through his instrumentality? Few laymen seem to realize the barriers and restraints against the gospel, behind which is the malice of the devil. The devil has killed the message in the heart of the preacher many a time before he could get it over to his people. There would be more fire in the pulpit if there were more prayer in the pew. There was a certain brilliant preacher in England who moved great audiences with his eloquence. He had a blind brother who spent most of his time in praying for him. One morning as this preacher had stirred the crowd in an unusual way, he had a vision. A light from heaven seemed to shine down, and it rested not upon himself nor anyone save his blind brother. Then he realized that his power was not due to his cultured eloquence but to the praying brother.

The apostle next exhorts that they will pray that he might be delivered from unreasonable and wicked men. Every missionary work has its enemies. Preachers have to deal with most unreasonable antagonists. Often they are subtle and malicious. They seek to intimidate, browbeat and even to plot against character, and these enemies are persons who make some profession of religion. If there was ever a day when preachers needed the support of a praying people it is today when the gospel has so many insidious enemies.

In the 6th verse the apostle exhorts the Christians to withdraw themselves from certain church members who are falling out of line with the new Testament teachings. The 11th verse shows that he has special reference to idlers who found in their belief concerning the second coming of Christ a pretext for neglecting duty and living on other people. Paul was strong for discipline in the church, and that right early. The circumstances of ecclesiastical life today, when we have a professional minister on salary, makes it difficult to discipline. The result often is that gross scandals are tolerated to the injury of the church at large.

Regarding these religious loafers, the apostle says, in verse 10: "This, we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat." This is a necessary and merciful rule, neglect of which makes charity demoralizing. Some people speak of work as a part of the curse and quote Gen. 3:19. It should not be forgotten that the institution of work is of earlier origin. (Gen. 2:15.) Right work well done leads to happiness. Our Lord was a carpenter. Christianity is a gospel of work and its founders were giants in labor.

The apostle next shows that these loafers become busybodies. Idle bodies are busybodies. Busybodies are loafers who are very busy in the concerns of other people. They have often been a curse to the church. Where swarms of insects abound devices are often used to get rid of them. A powerful light attracts the bugs and a suction fan gathers them in for destruction. Can't someone conceive something to rid the church and the home of the pests that buzz around and worry people with idle gossip and sting the innocent? The apostle suggests that such people are to be noted and that consistent believers will have nothing to do with them. He says in the 14th verse that if they are left to themselves they may in time become ashamed of themselves. Few can bear the test of being severely let alone. It causes self-examination. He also suggests that they should be admonished. When a person is hurting the testimony of a church he should be dealt with.

What man has done man can do, but it's never half so much as a woman expects him to do.

Have You Noticed How the "Ads" --Both Display and Classified--Are Increasing in the Glendale Press?

"THERE'S A REASON"

1st—The Glendale Daily Press has over 2,000 More Circulation than any other Paper Circulating in Glendale.

2nd—The Glendale Daily Press has a Progressive Policy. It is not controlled by any clique or set of men. It speaks straight from the shoulder. Its aim is to serve the best interests of the community without favoring any interests or individuals. In other words,

THE GLENDALE DAILY PRESS IS AN INDEPENDENT PROGRESSIVE NEWSPAPER WITH BACKBONE AND A DEFINITE POLICY

—which is expressed Daily in its editorial columns. It is forging ahead, because the people like it—they know it is watching their interests and will do all in its power to protect the welfare of Glendale.

NO GREEN GOODS HERE!

The Circulation of the Glendale Daily Press is operated upon the Little Merchants Plan, which insures a bona fide paid circulation, that is far ahead of the newspaper which allows its subscriptions to "run as long as you wish and pay when you will."

We believe that our advertising columns offer the best medium for presenting the message of Glendale merchants, because we reach the most people. We have editions for Eagle Rock and Burbank. Three daily newspapers with an advertising rate that is not high enough for one daily paper.

Here are the sworn statements required by the government from both Glendale Daily Papers:

THE FACTS IN A NUTSHELL:

GLENDALE DAILY PRESS ..... 4,985

SECOND NEWSPAPER ..... 3,336

GLENDALE DAILY PRESS LEAD
OVER SECOND NEWSPAPER. 1,649

But, Dear Reader, since the statements were published in October, THE GLENDALE DAILY PRESS has added 715 READERS TO ITS LIST and its circulation now exceeds the sworn statement of the second paper by 2364. Growing some in three months, you say. Well, you're right. Watch us grow during 1923. Watch the advertising columns grow. Glendale has live, progressive merchants and they are using the advertising columns of the Glendale Daily Press to send their message to the people.

'ROBIN'S NEST' TO OPEN AT POMONA

"Robin's Nest," a boarding home for little girls from 4 to 12 years of age, will be opened in Pomona May 1st. The home is more especially for the children of working mothers, who are unable to give their little ones the necessary care and attention that children of this age require; but any child of the age is eligible, if the parent or guardian can give one good reference and a certificate of good health from a physician.

The girls will attend a public school, near enough for them to come home at noon for a nice hot lunch. They will receive their duties to perform each morning, changing places each week, and will be taught sewing, knitting, embroidery and everything that is suitable for little girls to know.

This is not an institution, but a real home. The object is to be just one family of little sisters under the care of two house mothers, long experienced in the care and study of children, and who strive through love and patience to teach the girls to be kind and thoughtful of each other and of those about them, to know right from wrong, and do their best at all times.

The children will attend a Protestant church and Sunday school. Those in charge of the "Nest" are Mrs. Helen M. Bemis, 220 East Center street, and Mrs. P. C. Glynn, 1340 South Towne avenue, Pomona, Calif. Telephone, after 6 p. m., 1355 Pomona.

PLACE OF BROAD RIVERS IS TEXT OF EDMONDS

Sunday morning at the Presbyterian church, Rev. W. E. Edmonds gave a meditation upon the theme, "The glorious Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers." (Is. 33:4).

This special expression "glorious Lord" is an expression of highest praise and confidence. "The glorious Lord" proposes to do something for His people, to be a place of broad rivers.

"Broad" to us generally means shallow; oh, let us not be broad in that way; too broad! But there are lives that are shallow and narrow. God's program is both broad and deep. There is a good deal of narrowness in the world, of narrow vision. How far can you see?

God wants to lead us into a place of broad rivers. First, the river of freedom, freedom of the gospel. You buy it without money or price; He has nothing for sale. Free is His pardon and justification for whoever will take. And the river of fullness; salvation is complete and perfect at the beginning. Then the river of power; "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me." And the river of fruitfulness; growing by it we shall bring forth fruit that the world can recognize.

There is a certain type that broad river suggests—peace, the perfect peace of God. The world needs this today more than anything else. Not a man on earth has a program that can meet it. Another type is purity. There is spiritual uncleanness and need to take a spiritual bath. Do you know what it is to take that?

Another river type is the river of joy. Keep sweet! This will lift you right up. May this glorious Lord open up to us broad rivers of joy in spite of tempest and storm. Come back to the important thought of power, a broad river of it is needed. You come along rivers, there are powerhouses along them for accomplishing all useful results. Every church should be a powerhouse along the river of life, a dynamic place of accomplishment.

Ezekiel had that vision of the river issuing from under the throne of God, ankle deep, knee deep to the thighs, a river to swim in; a place for ships—"there shall go no galley with oars" on this river, oars of human effort. We have much machinery, oars with sweat; but no, there should be propelling power within the life of the believer; our lives should be open to the flow of God's river with all its power.

Gideon's battle—it was God who won that battle. David was bidden sit down under the mulberry trees and wait till he heard God's stirring of their tops, then he should make his move. So he did—but he waited. Let us get ready this way—listen first for God; our Lord is coming for victory these days!

CREATIVE THOUGHT DISCUSSED BY DR. FAREED

The very attractive subject of "Creative Thought" for Sunday morning's lecture gave Dr. Fareed an excellent opportunity to express himself at his best. It was the consensus of opinion of those who heard him that it was the most interesting discourse he had delivered since he has occupied the platform of the New Thought Center.

The whole theme was built around and centered on the great within—the cave where the higher self dwells, which no one else can approach—the citadel—the holy of holies, where one may commune with his God.

He likened man to a book which he is born with, and the pages are written by the thoughts and acts of life. In these days when the study of psychology is attracting the whole world every one should be anxious to leave as his record an improved edition of the book given at birth. Perhaps some of the chapters were written by overindulgent parents, who knew nothing of the great laws ruling mental action, but with the present understanding those chapters may be changed. This is where an understanding of the wonderful power of creative thought spells self mastery and makes the plus man or the plus woman.

In any proposed enterprise capital is the most important factor, and in creative thought one's capital is to find one's own center in his own divine self. Unless that center is found one cannot have the power commanded by God, neither can one meet well the battles of life without knowing his center. It is understanding this that makes a man great and gives him the capacity to rule and direct those less developed. It takes time and practice to find this, but it is well worth the effort, and those who have found "the secret place of the most high," know it is the only lasting and eternal thing that man possesses. God could not have given the race a greater heritage than the power to direct thought, for with this double edged sword one can mold and shape his character according to his understanding of that power.

KNIGHT RIDERS REACH GLENDALE

"The Knight Riders" is the latest organization to make its bow to the owners of Knight automobiles and others in California. The idea of having all the Knight owners of California band themselves together has taken the state by storm and it is claimed that this is the fastest growing organization in California today.

Although having been started but a few days ago "The Knight Riders" society is already several thousand strong. One of the most recent persons to become a "rider" is John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland company. He was initiated into the order last week at the Ambassador hotel in Los Angeles.

The white Knight car, announcing this organization to Glendale is about town today, and is attracting a great deal of attention.

Further details of the "Knight Riders" will be given tonight at the salesroom of the George T. Smith company, 226 South Brand boulevard. At that time a treat will be given to the motorists of Glendale, especially Knight car owners, this to be in the form of a lecture by F. W. Lawton, internal combustion engineer expert and representative of the Willys-Overland factory.

MIDDLE WEST STORM SWEEP

Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Under Deluge of Rain and Snow

CHICAGO, March 12.—With telephone and telegraph lines being repaired, cities of the Mississippi valley and the central west states today started a check on the damage caused by the heavy snow and rain storm, accompanied by a high wind, that swept over the area last night.

Almost simultaneous with the storm, telegraph and telephone service ceased to function. With few wires remaining workable, reports on the extent of the storm were materially delayed. Iowa was swept by a rain and snow and rain, but because of the demoralized communications, its intensity was not known early today. High winds were prevalent throughout the south.

Heavy rains fell last night in Mississippi, Arkansas, Oklahoma and the eastern third of Kansas. A heavy wet snow fell near Topeka, Kansas, the precipitation almost equalling the total since last Thanksgiving Day.

Cyclone Sweeps Fayette Co., Ky.
RICHMOND, Ky., March 12. (A. P.)—Three persons were killed, two fatally injured and a number seriously hurt by a cyclone which swept over a small section on the Madison-Fayette counties border, shortly before last midnight.

Cyclone Kills 20 in Tennessee
JACKSON, Tenn., March 12. (A. P.)—Twenty persons are reported killed and 75 injured near Pinson, Tenn., 12 miles south of Jackson, by the storm which swept over that section last night. A number of dead and injured are negroes. About fifty dwellings about Pinson were wrecked, according to meager reports received here. A freight train was blown from the track in that vicinity.

Only minor property damage occurred here. Relief parties were sent from Jackson and plans were made to bring the injured to hospitals here. Wire communications with Pinson are cut off.

Dallas, Texas, Is Touched by Storm
DALLAS, Tex., March 12. (A. P.)—A 40-mile gale, accompanied by a dust storm, swept west and north Texas yesterday causing minor damage here. Slight damage was reported from Denison and Fort Worth.

DR. HADDEN TO BE HONORED AT DINNER

To Mark Opening of Evangelistic Services at Presbyterian Church

About 200 men will gather in the parlors of the Glendale Presbyterian church at 6:30 this evening for a dinner in honor of Dr. Robert A. Hadden. These men will be the guests of the deacons, elders and trustees, and this gathering will be the opening meeting of the Hadden evangelistic services which will continue for two weeks. ## EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

Chapter XIV—Continued

When they entered the larger of the two rooms Lady Bramfell was still receiving her guests. She was a tall and angular woman, who, except for a certain beauty of hands and feet and a certain similarity of voice, possessed nothing in common with her sister Lillian. She was speaking to a group of people as they approached, and the first sound of her sweet and rather drawing tones touched Loder with a curious momentary feeling—a vague suggestion of awakened memories. Then the suggestion vanished as she turned and greeted Eve.

"How sweet of you to come!" she murmured. And it seemed to Loder that a more spontaneous smile lighted up her face. Then she extended her hand to him. "And you, too!" she added. "Though I fear we shall bore you dreadfully."

Watching her with interest, he saw the change of expression as her eyes turned from Eve to him, and noticed a colder tone in her voice as she addressed him directly. The observation moved him to self-assertion.

"That's a poor compliment to me," he said. "To be bored is surely only a polite way of being insane."

Lady Bramfell smiled. "What!" she exclaimed. "You defending your social reputation?"

Loder laughed a little. "The smaller it is, the more defending it needs," he replied.

Another stream of arrivals swept by them as he spoke; Eve smiled at their hostess and moved across the room, and he perceived followed. As he gained her side, the little court about Lady Bramfell was left well in the rear, the great throng at the farther end of the room was not yet reached, and for the moment they were practically alone.

There was a certain uneasiness in that moment of companionship. It seemed to him that Eve wished to speak, but hesitated. Once or twice she opened and closed the fan that she was carrying, and at last, as if by an effort, she turned and looked at him.

"Why were you so cold to Bobby Blessington?" she asked. "Doesn't it seem discourteous to ignore him as you did?"

Her manner was subdued, it was not the annoyed manner that one uses to a man when he has behaved ill; it was the explanatory tone one might adopt towards an incorrigible child. Loder felt this; but the gist of a remark always came to him first, its mode of expression later. The fact that it was Blessington whom he had encountered—Blessington to whom he had spoken with vague politeness—came to him with a sense of unpleasantness. He was not to blame in the matter, nevertheless he blamed himself. He was annoyed that he should have made the slip in Eve's presence.

They were moving forward, nearing the press of people in the second room, when Eve spoke, and the fact filled him with an added sense of annoyance. People smiled and bowed to her from every side; one woman leaned forward as they passed and whispered something in her ear. Again the sensation of futility and vexation filled him; again he realized how palpable was the place she held in the world. Then, as his feelings reached their height and speech seemed forced upon him, a small man with a round face, catching a glimpse of Eve, darted from a circle of people gathered in one of the windows and came quickly towards them. With an unjust touch of irritation he recognized Lord Bramfell.

Again the sense of Eve's aloofness stung him as their host approached. In another moment she would be lost to him among this throng of strangers—claimed by them as by right.

"Eve—" he said, involuntarily and under his breath.

She half paused and turned towards him. "Yes?" she said; and he wondered if it was his imagination that made the word sound slightly eager.

"About that matter of Blessington—" he began. Then he stopped. Bramfell had reached them.

The little man came up smiling and with an outstretched hand. "There's no penalty for separating husband and wife, is there, Mrs. Chilcote? How are you, Chilcote?" He turned from one to the other with the quick, noiseless manner that always characterized him.

Loder turned aside to hide his vexation, but Eve greeted their host with her usual self-possessed smile.

"You are exempt from all penalties to-night," she said. Then she turned to greet the members of his party who had strolled across from the window in his wake.

As she moved aside Bramfell looked at Loder. "Well, Chilcote, have you dipped into the future yet?" he asked, with a laugh.

Loder echoed the laugh but said nothing. In his uncertainty at the question he reverted to his old resource of silence.

Bramfell raised his eyebrows. "What!" he said. "Don't tell me that my sister-in-law hasn't engaged you as a victim?" Then he turned in Eve's direction. "You've heard of our new departure, Mrs. Chilcote?"

Eve looked round from the lively group by which she was surrounded. "Lillian's crystal-gazing? Why, of course," she said. "She should make a very beautiful seer. We are all quite curious."

Bramfell pursed up his lips. "She has a very beautiful tent at the end of the conservatory. It took five men as many days to rig it up. We couldn't hear ourselves talk, for hammering. My wife said it made her feel quite philanthropic, it reminded her so much of a charity bazaar."

Everybody laughed; and at the same moment Blessington came quickly across the room and joined the group.

"Hallo!" he said. "Anybody seen Witcheaton? He's next on my list for the crystal business."

Again the whole party laughed, and Bramfell, stepping forward, touched Blessington's arm in mock seriousness.

"Witcheaton is playing bridge, like a sensible man," he said. "Leave him in peace, Bobby."

Blessington made a comical grimace. "But I'm working this on commercial principles," he said. "I keep the list, names and hours complete, and Lady Astrupp gazes, in blissful ignorance as to who her victims are. The whole thing is great—simple and statistical."

"For goodness' sake, Bobby, shut up!" Bramfell's round eyes were twinkling with amusement.

"But my system—"

"Systems! Ah, we all had them when we were as young as you are!"

"And they all had flaws, Bobby," Eve broke in. "We were always finding gaps that had to be filled up. Never mind about Lord Witcheaton, get a substitute; it won't count—if Lillian doesn't know."

Blessington wavered as she spoke. His eyes wandered round the party and again rested on Bramfell.

"Not me, Bobby! Remember, I've breathed crystals—practically lived on them—for the last week. Now, there's Chilcote—" Again his eyes twinkled.

All eyes were turned on Loder, though one or two stared surreptitiously to Eve. She, seeming sensitive to the position, laughed quickly.

"A very good idea," she said. "Who wants to see the future, if not a politician?"

Loder glanced from her to Blessington. Then, with a very feminine impulse, she settled the matter beyond dispute.

"Please use your authority, Bobby," she said. "And when you've got him safely under canvas, come back to me. It's years since we've had a talk." She nodded and smiled, then instantly turned to Bramfell with some trivial remark.

For a second Loder waited, then with a movement of resignation he laid his hand on Blessington's arm. "Very well," he said. "But if my fate is black, witness it was my wife who sent me to it." His faint pause on the word wife, the mention of the word itself in the presence of these people, had a savor of recklessness. The small discomfiture of his earlier slip vanished before it; he experienced a strong reaction of confidence in his luck. With a cool head, a steady step, and a friendly pressure of the fingers on Blessington's arm, he allowed himself to be drawn across the reception-rooms, through the long corridors, and down the broad flight of steps that led to the conservatory.

The conservatory was a feature of the Bramfell townhouse, and to Loder it came as something wonderful and unlooked-for—with its clustering green branches, its slight, unobtrusive arches, its temperately pleasant atmosphere. He felt no wish to speak as, still guided by Blessington, he passed down the shadowy paths that in the half-light had the warmth and mystery of a Southern garden. Here and there from the darkness came the whispering of a voice or the sound of a laugh, bringing with them the necessary touch of life. Otherwise the place was still.

Absorbed by the air of solitude, contrasting so remarkably with the noise and crowded glitter left behind in the reception-rooms, he had moved half-way down the long, green aisle before the business in hand came back to him with a sudden sense of annoyance. It seemed so pithy to mar the quiet of the place with the absurdity of a side-show. He turned to Blessington with a touch of abruptness.

"What am I expected to do?" he asked.

Blessington looked up, surprised. "Why, I thought, sir—" he began. Then he instantly altered his tone. "Oh, just enter into the spirit of the thing. Lady Astrupp won't put much strain on your credulity, but she'll make a big call on your solemnity."

He laughed.

He had an infectious laugh, and Loder responded to it.

"But what am I to do?" he persisted.

"Oh, nothing. Being the priestess, she naturally demands acolytes; but she'll let you know that she holds the prior place. The tent is so fixed that she sees nothing beyond your hands; so there's absolutely no delusion."

He laughed once more. Then suddenly he lowered his voice and slackened his steps. "Here we are!" he whispered, in pretended awe.

At the end of the path the space widened to the full breadth of the conservatory. The light was dimmer, giving an added impression of distance; away to the left, Loder

THE CHARACTERS IN THE STORY

JOHN CHILCOTE, member of the House of Commons, walks out of Parliament on a January night marked by the blackest fog in years and news of border risings against the Persian government which are branded by LAKELY, editor of St. George's, as the index of a long cherished Russian scheme growing to maturity under the lax British policy. In the fog Chilcote jostles a stranger, and lighting his cigarette, is astounded to see that the other man is the exact counterpart of himself. They exchange cards, the stranger's revealing him to be

JOHN LODER. Depressed from morphia the next morning, Chilcote seeks solace in the company of LADY ASTRUPP, then to Parliament, where he makes a near spectacle of himself. A hopeless drug addict, he induces Loder to change places in life with him. So successful is the deception that Loder not only becomes a strong political lieutenant of PRADIE, the great party leader, but is never suspected by the servants or Chilcote's wife, EVE. He is recalled by Chilcote, who steps back into his own shoes temporarily. Chilcote cannot stay away from drugs and again he changes places with Loder. Loder takes Eve Chilcote to a social function at Lady Bramfell's. There is an embarrassing moment when Loder meets Chilcote's former secretary, BLESSINGTON, but this passes, and he, with Eve, goes to the reception rooms.

"You must take off your rings," she said smoothly. [Marcia Manon as Lady Astrupp with Guy Bates Post as Loder in "The Masquerader."] heard the sound of splashing water, and on his right hand he caught his first glimpse of the tent that was his goal.

It was an artistic little structure—a pavilion formed of silky fabric that showed bronze in the light of an Oriental lamp that hung above its entrance. As they drew closer, a man emerged from it. He stood for a moment in uncertainty, looking about him; then, catching sight of them, he came forward laughing.

"By George!" he exclaimed, "it's as dark as limbo in there! I didn't see you at first. But I say, Blessington, it's a beastly shame to have that thunder-cloud barrier shutting off the sorceress. If she gazes at the crystal, mayn't we have something to gaze at, too?"

Blessington laughed. "You want too much, Gally!" he said. "Lady Astrupp understands the value of the unobtainable. Come along, sir!" he added to Loder, drawing him forward with an energetic pressure of the arm.

Loder responded, and as he did so a flicker of curiosity touched his mind for the first time. He wondered for an instant who this woman was who aroused so much comment. And with the speculation came the remembrance of how she had assured Chilcote that on one point at least he was invulnerable. He had spoken then from the height of a past experience—an experience so fully passed that he wondered now if it had been as staple a guarantee as he had then believed. Man's capacity for outliving is astonishingly complete. The long-ago incident in the Italian mountains had faded, like a crayon study in which the tones have merged and gradually lost character. The past had faded before the present—his golden hair might pale before black. The smile came back with apparent irrelevance. Then again Blessington pressed his arm.

"Now, sir," he said, drawing away and lifting the curtain that hung before the entrance of the tent. Loder looked at the amused, boyish face lighted by the hanging lamp, and smiled pleasantly; then, with a shrug of the shoulders, he entered the pavilion, and the curtain fell behind him.

CHAPTER XV

ON entering the pavilion, Loder's first feeling was one of annoyance at finding himself in a place of total darkness. But as his eyes grew accustomed to the gloom, the feeling vanished and the absurdity of the position came to his mind.

The tent was small, heavily draped with silk and smelling of musk. It was divided into two sections by an immovable curtain that hung from the roof to within a few feet of the floor. The only furniture on Loder's side was one low chair, and the only light a faint radiance that, coming from the invisible half of the pavilion, spread across the floor in a pale band. For a short space he stood uncertain, then his hesitation was brought to an end.

"Please sit down," said a low, soft voice.

For a further moment he stood undecided. The voice sounded so unexpectedly near. In the quiet and Chilcote to have adopted jewelry and had seen the designs of his rings, the sight of his own scarred finger would suggest question and comment; if, on the other hand, he left the pavilion without excuse, or if, without apparent reason, he refused to remove the rings, he opened up a new difficulty—a fresh road to curiosity. It came upon him with unusual quickness—the obstacles to, and the need for, a speedy decision.

He glanced round the tent, then unconsciously he straightened his shoulders. After all, he had stepped into a tight corner, but there was no need to cry out in squeaking his way back. Then he realized that the soft, ingratiating tones were sounding once more.

"It's the passing of my hands over yours, while I look into the crystal, that sets up sympathy"—a slender hand moved swiftly into the light and picked up the ball—"and makes my eyes see the pictures in your mind. Now, will you please take off your rings?"

The very naturalness of the request disarmed him. It was a risk. But, as Chilcote had said, risk was the salt of life!

"I'm afraid you think me very troublesome." The voice came again, delicately low and conciliatory.

For a brief second Loder wondered uncertainly how long or how well Chilcote knew Lady Astrupp; then he dismissed the question. Chilcote had never mentioned her until tonight, and then casually as Lady Bramfell's sister. What a coward he was becoming in throwing the dice with Fate! Without further delay he drew off the rings, slipped them into his pocket, and replaced his hands on the smooth table-top.

Then, at the moment that he replaced them, a peculiar thing occurred.

From the farther side of the dark partition came the quick, rustling stir of a skirt, and the slight scrape of a chair pushed either backward or forward. Then there was silence.

Now, silence can suggest anything, from profound thought to imbecility; but in this case its suggestion was nil. That something had happened, that some change had taken place, was as patent to Loder as the darkness of the curtain or the band of light that crossed the floor, but what had occasioned it, or what it stood for, he made no attempt to decide. He sat blinking conscious of his hands spread openly on the table under the scrutiny of eyes that were invisible to him—vividly aware of the awkwardness of his position. He felt with instinctive certainty that a new chord had been struck; but a man seldom acts on instinctive certainties. If the exposure of his hands had struck this fresh note, then any added action would but heighten the dilemma. He sat silent and motionless.

Whether his impassivity had any bearing on the moment he had no way of knowing; but no further movement came from behind the partition. Whatever the emotions that had caused the sharp swish of skirts and the sharp scrape of the chair, they had evidently subsided or been dominated by other feelings.

The next indication of life that came to him was the laying down of the crystal ball. It was laid back upon the table with a slight jerk that indicated a decision come to; and almost simultaneously the seer's voice came to him again. Her tone was lower now than it had been before, and its extreme ease seemed slightly shaken—whether by excitement, surprise, or curiosity, it was impossible to say.

"You will think it strange—" she began. "You will think—" Then she stopped.

There was a pause, as though she waited for some help, but Loder remained mute. In difficulty a silent tongue and a cool head are usually man's best weapons.

His silence was disconcerting. He heard her stir again.

"You will think it strange—" she began once more. Then quite suddenly she checked and controlled her voice. "You must forgive me for what I am going to say," she added, in a completely different tone, "but crystal-gazing is such an illusive thing. Directly you put your hands upon the table I felt that there would be no result; but I wouldn't admit the defeat. Women are such keen anglers that they can never acknowledge that any fish, however big, has slipped the hook." She laughed softly.

At the sound of the laugh Loder shifted his position for the first time. He could not have told why, but it struck him with a slight sense of confusion. A precipitate wish to rise and pass through the doorway into the wider spaces of the conservatory came to him, though he made no attempt to act upon it. He knew that for some inexplicable reason, this woman behind the screen had lied to him—in the controlling of her speech, in her change of voice. There had been one moment in which an impulse or an emotion had almost forced its way through, and he had quivered, and the moment had passed. There was a riddle in the very atmosphere of the place—and he alone had riddled it.

But Lady Astrupp was absorbed in her own concerns. Again she changed her position; and to Loder, listening attentively, it seemed that she leaned forward and examined his hands afresh. The sensation was so acute that he withdrew them involuntarily.

Again there was a confused rustle; the crystal ball rolled from the table, and the seer laughed quickly. Obeying a strenuous impulse, Loder rose.

He had no definite notion of what he expected or what he must avoid. He was only conscious that the pavilion, with its silk draperies, its scent of musk, and its intolerable secrecy, was no longer endurable. He felt cramped and confused in mind and muscle. He stood for a second to straighten his limbs; then he turned, and, moving directly forward, passed through the portiere.

After the dimness of the pavilion the conservatory seemed comparatively bright; but without waiting to grow accustomed to the altered light he moved onward with deliberate haste. The long, green alley, was speedily traversed; in his eyes it no longer possessed greenness, no longer suggested freshness or repose. It was simply a means to the end upon which his mind was set.

As he passed up the flight he drew his rings from his pocket and slipped them on again. Then he stepped into the glare of the thronged corridor.

Some one hailed him as he passed through the crowd, but with Chilcote's most absorbed manner he hurried on. Through the door of the supper-room he caught sight of Blessington and Eve, and then for the first time his expression changed, and he turned directly towards them.

"Eve," he said, "will you excuse me? I have a word to say to Blessington."

She glanced at him in momentary surprise; then she smiled in her quiet, self-possessed way.

"Of course," she said. "I've been wanting a chat with Millicent Gower, but Bobby has required so much entertainment—" She smiled again, this time at Blessington and moved away towards a pale girl in green who was standing alone.

Instantly she had turned Loder took Blessington's arm.

"I know you're tremendously busy," he began, in an excellent imitation of Chilcote's hasty manner—"I know you're tremendously busy, but I'm in a fix."

Blessington's healthy, ingenuous face told him that plain speaking was the method to adopt.

"Indeed, sir?" In a moment Blessington was on the alert.

"Yes. And I—I want your help."

The boy reddened. That Chilcote should appeal to him stirred him to an uneasy feeling of pride and uncertainty.

Loder saw his advantage and pressed it home. "It's come about through this crystal-gazing business. I'm afraid I didn't play my part—rather made an ass of myself; I wouldn't swallow the thing, and—"

and Lady Astrupp—"He paused, measuring Blessington with a glance. "Well, my dear boy, you—you know what women are!"

Blessington was only twenty-three. He reddened again, and assumed an air of profundity. "I know, sir," he said, with a shake of the head.

Loder's sense of humor was keen, but he kept a grave face. "I knew you'd catch my meaning; but I want you to do something more. If Lady Astrupp should ask you who was in her tent this past ten minutes, I want you—" Again he stopped, looking at his companion's face.

"Yes, sir?"

"I want you to tell an immaterial lie for me."

Blessington returned his glance; then he laughed a little uncomfortably. "But surely, sir—"

"She recognized me, you mean?" Loder's eyes were as keen as steel.

"Yes."

"Then you're wrong. She didn't."

There was silence. Loder glanced across the room. Eve had parted from the girl in green and was moving towards them, exchanging smiles and greetings as she came.

"My wife is coming back," he said. "Will you do this for me, Blessington?—It will smooth things—"

He spoke quickly, continuing to watch Eve. As he had hoped, Blessington's eyes turned in the same direction. "Twill smooth matters," he repeated, "smooth them in—in a domestic way that I can't explain."

The shot told. Blessington looked round.

"Right, sir!" he said. "You may leave it to me." And before Loder could speak again he had turned and disappeared into the crowd.

CHAPTER XVI

HIS business with Blessington over, Loder breathed more freely. If Lady Astrupp had recognized Chilcote by the rings, and had been induced to curiosity, the incident would demand settlement sooner or later—settlement in what proportion he could hazard no guess; if, on the other hand, her obvious change of manner had arisen from any other source—he had a hazy idea that a woman's behavior could never be gauged by accepted theories—then he had safeguarded Chilcote's interests and his own by securing of Blessington's promise. Blessington he knew would be reliable and discreet. With a renewal of confidence—a pleasant feeling that his uneasiness had been groundless—he moved forward to greet Eve.

Her face, with its rich, clear coloring, seemed to his gaze to stand out from the crowd of other faces as from a frame, and a sense of pride touched him. In every eye but his own her beauty belonged to him.

His face looked alive and masterful as she reached his side. "May I monopolize you?" he said, with the quickness of speech borrowed from Chilcote. "We—we see so little of each other."

Almost as if compelled, her lashes lifted and her eyes met his. Her glance was puzzled, uncertain, slightly confused. There was a deeper color than usual in her cheeks. Loder felt something in his own consciousness stir in response.

"You know you are yielding," he said.

Again she blushed.

He saw the blush, and knew that it was he—his words, his personality—that had called it forth. In Chilcote's actual semblance he had proved his superiority over Chilcote. For the first time he had been given a tacit, personal acknowledgment of his power. Involuntarily he drew nearer to her.

"Let's get out of this crush."

She made no answer except to bend her head; and it came to him that, for all her pride, she liked—and unconsciously yielded to—domination. With a satisfied gesture he turned to make a passage towards the door.

But the passage was more easily desired than made. In the few moments since he had entered the supper-room the press of people had considerably thickened—until a block had formed about the doorway. Drawing Eve with him, he moved forward for a dozen paces, then paused, unable to make further headway.

As they stood there, he looked back at her. "What a study in democracy a crowd always is!" he said.

She responded with a bright, appreciative glance, as if surprised into naturalness. He wondered sharply what she would be like if her enthusiasms were really aroused. Then a stir in the corridor outside caused a movement inside the room; and with a certain display of persistence he was enabled to make a passage to the door.

There again they were compelled to halt. But, though tightly wedged into his new position and guarding Eve with one arm, Loder was free to survey the brilliantly thronged corridor over the head of a man a few inches shorter than himself, who stood directly in front of him.

"What are we waiting for?" he asked, good humoredly, addressing the back of the stranger's head.

The man turned, displaying a genial face, a red mustache, and an eye-glass.

"Hullo, Chilcote!" he said. "Hope it's not on your feet I'm standing!"

Loder laughed. "No," he said. "And don't change the position. If you were an inch higher I should be blind as well as crippled."

The other laughed. It was a pleasant surprise to find Chilcote amiable under discomfort. He looked round again in slight curiosity.

Loder felt the scrutiny. To create a diversion he looked out along the corridor. "I believe we are waiting for something," he exclaimed. "What's this?" Then quite abruptly he ceased to speak.

"Anything interesting?" Eve touched his arm.

He said nothing; he made no effort to look round. His thought as well as his speech was suddenly suspended.

The man in front of him let his eye-glass fall from his eye, then screwed it in again.

"Jove!" he exclaimed. "Here comes our sorceress. It's like the progress of a fairy princess. I believe this is the meaning of our getting penned in here." He chuckled delightedly.

Loder said nothing. He stared straight on over the other's head.

Along the corridor, agreeably conscious of the hum of admiration, she aroused, came Lillian Astrupp, surrounded by a little court. Her delicate face was lit up; her eyes shone under the faint gleam of her hair; her gown of gold embroidery swept round her gracefully. She was radiant and triumphant, but she was also excited. The excitement was evident in her laugh, in her gestures, in her eyes, as they turned quickly in one direction and then another.

Loder, gazing in stupefaction over the other man's head, saw it—felt and understood it with a mind that leaped back over a space of years.

As in a shifting panorama he saw a night of disturbance and confusion in a far-off Italian valley—a confusion from which one face shone out with something of the pale, alluring radiance that flittered over the hillside from the crescent moon. It passed across his consciousness slowly but with a slow completeness; and in its light the incidents of the past hour stood out in a new aspect. The echo of recollection stirred by Lady Bramfell's voice, the re-echo of it in the sister's tones; his own blindness, his own egregious assurance—all struck across his mind.

Truths in Epigram

We by our sufferings learn to prize our bliss.—Dryden.

Who hearkens to the gods, the gods give ear.—Homer.

By constant dripping a drop of water hollows out a rock.—Chaucer.

How many people live on the reputation of the reputation they might have made!—Holmes.

INDUSTRIAL DEPENDENCE

Manufacturers of tires have advanced prices recently. They admit that another advance in the near future is to be expected. The course thus taken is not arbitrary. It is doubtful that it represents any additional profit to the manufacturer, but on the contrary it seems to be a method of protection against dwindling profits or actual loss. The explanation is that the cost of crude rubber has jumped from 12 cents to 37 cents. England has control of the market. It is able not only to fix the price, but to restrict the quantity coming in this country. If this is not an intolerable condition, at least it is annoying enough to cause an effort to be made to change it.

When the world war began, the realization that the United States had relied solely on Germany for certain materials, notably chemicals, first became painfully acute. It had been understood before, but circumstances had not made clear the possible disadvantages. In the emergency such men as Edison set about the compounding of their own chemicals, and were more than satisfied with results. Such methods were devised that Germany, once more ready to meet the demand, found that the demand was being met from a new source.

Not all the rubber in the world grows on the other continent. The trees flourish in Central America, South America, and there is reason to believe that they would thrive as well as in the Philippines. It is desirable on general principles to enlarge commerce with peoples to the south, as a matter of business and diplomacy. Furnishing them with a market for their crude rubber would be mutually beneficial. Meanwhile the trees yielding rubber, being of slow growth, might be started in the island possessions, and in time produce a large part of the necessary total.

Americans cannot make rubber without the raw material, and in their own land, apparently the raw material cannot be grown. But the same type of energy that turned to making needed chemicals may be imagined reaching out to forests not under British control, where the American investor may obtain the right to operate. England has no geographical basis for a monopoly of rubber. Moreover, the thought of industrial dependence is hateful to American enterprise.

MEETING EMERGENCIES

People ask what is to be done when the supply of timber has been exhausted; when no longer are there measures of coal to be mined; when the vast store of oil shall have been drained.

They are looking a long way ahead of course. In doing so they think they discern conditions such as, in all probability, never are to eventuate. They also fret at times because of the fear that so many people are to be on the earth that the products of the globe cannot feed them. They forget the nicety with which nature has adjusted matters so far. They should remember, and have faith.

New building material is taking the place of wood while yet there remain many forests untouched. In all probability heat and power derived directly from the sun will end the use not only of coal, but every present form of fuel. The same system would render oil unnecessary save as a lubricant. Oil for this purpose does not have to be derived from wells. There are many ways of making it.

A Russian engineer is said to have invented a combined engine and train that runs by naphtha. It was tried first over a run that had required a train weighing 500 tons, the engine of which weighed 137 tons. During the trip it was customary to re-coal four times, and the coal consumption was sixteen tons. The new train, motor, and all weighed only 120 tons, and it made the distance on seventy pounds of naphtha. The inventor is said to be in France now negotiating for disposal of rights. Such trains at least would defer the day of fuel exhaustion.

Automobiles use a vast quantity of gasoline. Whenever the method of applying sun-power direct to heavier machines has been perfected, the automobiles will be benefited equally. There is far more likely to be conservation over the lack of a market for gasoline, no longer needed by "Lizzie" or limousine, than that the automobiles of the land shall be stranded because the wells have been pumped dry, and gasoline has become unknown.

According to Prof. Kincaid of the University of Washington, the jellyfish is the only creature that has made a success of communism. The jellyfish, he said, is a perfect soviet. Trotsky ought to feel pleased at being put on the intellectual level of the jellyfish.

A proposal has been made to set aside the citizenship of Isadora Duncan, because of her expressions of hostility to this government. The truth is that whether she admires this government or not is a matter of any consequence whatever. Any formal action against her would be as absurd as hunting a gnat with an elephant gun.

Many a man who wouldn't sell his vote has found a $2 bill that was lost by the wise candidate.

When a man makes an ostentatious display of his wealth he advertises himself as an easy mark.

It sometimes happens that the parson who gets a $10 marriage fee profits by the mistakes of others.

PREDICTING A SLUMP

When a business man predicts a slump an impulse arises to wonder why he does so. To say as one did recently, that the present year is to be prosperous and the year following also, but that in 1925, there is to be decided reaction, is merely to indulge in conjecture. The evil effect to be expected from such a prophesy is in the state of mind that it produces. A condition of prosperity in such a country as this ought to be regarded as normal. Health of body is normal, and yet the strongest become ill. If, in advance of any symptoms of malady, one were to set a date for the arrival of sickness, the sickness would be on schedule time. Therefore the manifest error of predicting failure. Belief in coming failure is fatal. It induces the mood that promotes failure. The chief use of the pessimist seems to have for prosperity is to set a date for it to disappear. It is the starting point of the morose type of seer, who, looking upon it, opines that it is too good to last.

This country is prosperous. Human circumstance is subject to change. The life of a community or nation, as the life of the individual, has ups and downs. Therefore when a high level of achievement has been reached, it is not to be considered fixed forever. Nevertheless the future is rich with promise, and the prospect is not blurred by the shadow of disaster. Then why prate of disaster? Today the sun shines, but there will be rains next winter. Possibly they will wash out a culvert or two somewhere. The possibility is nothing about which to worry.

The law resembles the ocean. Its greatest trouble is caused by breakers.

Anybody can fire a gun, but it takes practice to hit the target.

THE GIST OF PROHIBITION

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The New York senate and assembly united in adopting a resolution to legalize wine and beer by modification of the Volstead act. This resolution, when signed by the governor of the state, will be transmitted to each member of the United States senate and house of representatives.

This is an action which the legislators have a perfect right to do. If they believe that lighter alcoholic drinks should be sold, it is their privilege to say so.

In fact, those who do not believe that the prohibition amendment is a good thing are entirely justified in an agitation to have it repealed.

It is quite important that Americans should get an exact view of the situation. The constitution and its amendments, together with all other laws, represent the will of the majority enacted by those legal processes upon which they have agreed. If this is tyranny, it is the tyranny of the majority. Everybody cannot be of the same opinion. Somebody's will must prevail. And a democracy is that form of government under which the will of the majority prevails. It is the only form of government where a minority does not rule.

All the dissatisfied minority have to do is to convince enough voters to secure a majority. Any time the people of this country want the prohibition amendment repealed, they can repeal it, just as they enacted it.

No one can prevent them. They can also repeal the amendment giving women the right to vote and the amendment abolishing negro slavery, whenever they get ready.

In other words, it cannot too much be kept in mind that the majority of the people of this country can do precisely as they please.

In view of this fact all talk of tyranny and of being ruled by a group of fanatics is sheer nonsense. Most of those who do not believe as we do are considered fanatics. It is quite as fanatical to believe that any one should be allowed to sell beverages containing a habit-forming drug at every street corner as it is to believe that this should not be allowed.

The gist of the prohibition issue is that some people in the United States consider alcohol proper to belong among the habit-forming drugs along with opium and cocaine, and that the open sale of it is therefore inconsistent with the public welfare.

Others believe that the harm done by alcohol is not so great as to render it necessary to abolish its public use.

The members of the first class outnumber those of the second class and, have been able to elect enough legislators to write their convictions in the national constitution.

These people may be wrong, they may be puritanical, fanatical, or even crazy. That is not the point. The point is that there are more of them. They are the majority and they have gained their way in the plain and simple method laid down by the constitution.

All that the people in class two have to do is to convince enough of their fellow citizens that they are right to enable them to have a majority, so that they can elect their kind of legislators and enact their kind of law. Let them go to it. This is a free country.

In the meanwhile it is of most importance to all that citizens of every class should bear in mind that every law, sensible or not, should be obeyed.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

Strange enough it is that the ill in human nature that have accomplished the greatest disasters are not legislated against and cannot be directly legislated against.

JAMES W. FOLEY

Only indirectly can they be legislated against.

Thus the wars that have devastated the world through immemorial time have arisen from two main causes.

Greed and hatred.

And yet there is no legislation on the statute books against greed and hatred.

There is legislation to punish their manifestations or expressions in theft, murder, cheating and the like.

But there is no means by which we may legislate greed out of people. Or remove hatred by statute.

The social and economic disasters that have from time to time caused bitterness and bloodshed and financial loss incalculable arise largely from the same causes.

Greed and hatred.

Greed first and hatred arising from it.

Greed for gain.

Whether of the employer or the employee.

Bitterness arising from misunderstanding.

Hatred arising out of bitterness.

Again the vicious circle.

Whether in the nation or in the individual or in the body of individuals.

But the result is always the same.

Disaster.

So when we pray to be delivered from evil we do not mean that we shall be delivered from the evils without.

We may guard against them.

But we pray to be delivered from the evils within.

Which destroy us ere we know.

Prayer is a stirring up of the best within us.

It is not seeking altogether some aid from without us.

It is a seeking for the aid that is within us.

A rousing of our best nature.

We do not so much seek Divinity to come near us as we seek to come near Divinity.

So we should pray to be delivered from greed.

Greed with all its evil train of passions.

With its cheating and its thievery and its envy and its desire.

Greed with its trickery and sham and deceit and dishonesty.

And we should pray to be delivered from hatred.

From hatred with its attendant evils of scandal and intolerance and bigotry and unfriendliness and all that.

We need to be delivered from the evils within us.

And then we can with ease combat the evils without us.

Greed is unrestrained desire.

Whether for money or property of place or authority or whatever it is.

And unrestrained desire is the characteristic of the beast.

Songs of the Poets

Presence—By David Morton in "The Fugitive"

One had been ill and in his time of illness.

One who was gone now many, many days.

Was with him in a dim and ghostly stillness.

Was with him in her beautiful grave ways.

They brought him water . . . cool, sweet cups of healing.

And that was she in comfort and disguise.

And so, through all their mercies there was stealing

A tenderer mercy, watchful-eyed and wise.

They could not know, who had no way of knowing.

That one behind the darkness and the light,

Bided always their coming and their going.

And kept with them the watches of the night.

That dear, cool hands grown piteous and dim,

Guided their hands and bled and tended him.

A SIDE LIGHT ON CRIMINALITY

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

While we are searching for the basic cause of crime listen to the words of J. W. Cottrell, general superintendent of the Detective Association of America.

We should know something about crime and criminals and he has declared that:

"In searching for the causes of crime we find that the lack of humane education is the principal one," and he adds:

"I know of very few criminals who were taught to love animals."

Mothers and fathers, who give their boys guns, swords and lethal weapons to play with, might do well to reflect on the words of Mr. Cottrell.

What can a boy do with a gun except shoot something; and it is certain that before he shoots he must ignore the feelings of the bird or animal that he shoots.

In short, he must harden himself. The soldiers in the late war had to do that, millions of them. Any observer knows the result; we are today agitated at the spectacle of a crime soaked world.

Alexander von Humboldt, the great naturalist and traveler, said:

"Cruelty to animals is a characteristic vice of vulgar people."

All crime is vulgar and all crime is cruel.

We want to suppress crime. Consequently we should begin by suppressing it at the roots.

How effectively this may be done by humane education one may judge from a comment in the San Francisco Call touching conditions at the Jefferson school.

This school was once a center of disorder and a focus of petty cruelty. Cats, dogs, foreign children, any small and helpless thing that wandered into the neighborhood was the victim of the young hoodlums at that school.

Then came a principal who understood that children are naturally not hoodlums. They are basically kind and sympathetic with animals.

Using this knowledge he organized the children of the Jefferson schools into Bands of Mercy and made them the champions of their dumb brothers.

That was four years ago and today the Jefferson school is one of the most orderly in the city; and if we are to take the testimony of those who know, that principal by his wise work saved many a child in that school from a later criminal career and gave him to the world a kind and useful citizen.

Crime and cruelty are twin brothers and their mother is ignorance.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

CONCERNING DOGMA [Boston Transcript]

As far as can be judged from the press reports, Mr. Ellaire Belloc seems to think that without dogmatic religion civilization must collapse. The opinions of so able and candid a man as our English visitor must engage attention, although that fact does not mean that all must necessarily agree with them.

Mr. Belloc says what he does because he is sincerely convinced of his duty to do so, a conviction that must appeal to a New England public in which matters of the conscience have ever been respected.

This being so, one asks what is meant by dogmatic religion, for in matters of religious faith there are many dogmas and they are by no means alike. The Luther with whom Mr. Belloc would not agree was extremely dogmatic on one point with Zwingli. The Joseph De Maistre with whom Mr. Belloc would agree had a dogma much at variance with that of Rousseau, who in turn was quite as stiff about certain rights of man as the Savoyard would be about his particular theology. Under which king, Bellocian? Are all the dogmas right, or is none?

The question would probably seem to the distinguished visitor to be one of skepticism, but it is nothing of the sort, and these somewhat facile charges of skepticism arise from a confusion between faith and dogma. This is a distinction most evident in many other matters than theology. If we look at Russia, we see dogma carried to the nth degree, only it happens to be a dogma of economics and politics. It is dogma all the same; and he that does not accept it is made to suffer.

It is on observing these contraries that we must ask of Mr. Belloc and other sincere men just which dogma they would have to save the world and civilization, for it is a question among several dogmas. How much would Samuel Johnson, Mr. Belloc and Jonathan Edwards agree one with the other? And yet they are all honorable dogmatists.

OBSERVED AT A GLANCE

By HENRY JAMES

Gasoline shortage is said to be possible, but it is not deemed probable, and signs of alarm are absent.

Mines set by one Irish faction killed twelve members of that group, and did not advance anybody's cause particularly.

When a dancer is reported as declining to do his steps at $10,000 a week responsibility for a whooper rests with his press agent.

A man who killed his wife had written a note saying "I am at the end of my rope." Not yet, but soon, perhaps.

Certain citizens of a beach town who paid for whiskey and got water, notwithstanding the superiority of the latter, think they were cheated.

Sellers of wild cat oil stock are doubtless annoyed at the tendency of the authorities to lock them up. It so interferes with business.

Socialists seem to have been defeated in their effort to make Wisconsin secede from the Union.

New York courts seem to be withdrawing the feminine privilege of slaying the offensive male at will.

Another cinema star leaves her husband, but she won't get any publicity in this paragraph.

M. Locheur of France "sees peace in Europe." Here is hoping that there is nothing wrong with his powers of vision.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

There is a magazine the editorial course of which commands wide respect. Its good opinion is much to be desired. It tells with unbiased clarity of men and measures and great events.

The advertisements in this magazine are amazing in character. Many of them would strike the reader as the veriest claptrap, designed to deceive the ignorant. But the ignorant are not likely to be patrons of the publication in question. Perhaps it is hoped to deceive readers who are not ignorant. Perhaps the publishers themselves have been misled by alluring statements.

There are men who profess ability to teach every secret of success. They put this priceless knowledge into a cheap book. Doubtless they sell in quantity; that is their secret of personal success. They tell the druggies of the business world how to go to the head of their callings, over night, as it were. The man dissatisfied with his salary, has only to get this book, study it an evening or two, and find his salary doubled.

The bashful person is taught to shed his timidity and be the leader of the social circle. The salesman who can't sell, reads the book, and thereafter hypnotizes every customer into buying the limit. The tongue-tied wooer or orator or peddler cons a few pages, and begins to charm his environment by the beauty of his speech, etc., etc.

Well, when the individual believes these things, to him they represent the solid and comforting truth.

Some Oklahoma legislator has evolved a plan to require newspaper men to undergo an examination as to fitness. If they pass, they are to get, at the moderate cost of $10, a license to practice their profession. Information is lacking as to detail.

Who shall be the examiner? Nobody belonging to the legislature surely. The average such individual would not be competent either to determine fitness of another, or to be a newspaper man himself.

On the whole, the plan does not seem feasible. The newspaperman is subject to scrutiny a plenty. The boss sizes him up before giving him a job, and ever keeps upon his work a critical eye. The public sizes him up on general principles, and is quick to pass along the word that he does not know his business.

Besides, often he hasn't the $10.

New York has inaugurated a decided reform touching the treatment of women guilty of killing a male deemed in each case, at the time at least, to be undesirable. The male might have been a former husband or a present husband, or a prospect, or a discard. Whatever his status, the right of the lady to shoot him, and thereafter charm the jury into approval of the course, had not until recently been questioned.

Within the last few weeks three women have been convicted of some form of homicide, the verdict meaning a stiff penalty, twenty years, or something like that.

This may be shocking to sensitive feminine souls who possibly had selected a target, and picked out a courtroom costume, but it seems quite the proper thing to most. It is equally finding a new form of expression.

Out this way one thinks of the discomfort of snow, but seldom of the cost. Figures from New York city concerning this phase of winter, are quite interesting.

So far this season the street commissioner has received $5,000,000 to be expended in clearing the streets of snow. Of this sum $800,000 remained when the heaviest storm of the winter came along, and more than exhausted the fund.

The snowfall has been a little above 52 inches. Getting rid of it costs about $105,000 an inch.

Never sing "Beautiful Snow" to a New York taxpayer, and expect an answering smile.

The other expenses of winter back there are difficult to compute, they show themselves in such varied form, and are not officially recorded. Think of the pipes that burst, the constructive work brought to a standstill, the commerce halted, the railroads blocked, the wreckage of automobiles due to skidding and drifts. The added bills for illness would make a considerable aggregate. The extra call for charity has to be heeded.

However, New Yorkers will say, even when not asked, that they like to live there.

Sheriffs and police have killed a number of bandits in the last few months. Once they came upon a gang of four and got them all, one living. That one is in the penitentiary.

The other night men in a curtained automobile tried to kill some of the sheriff's deputies. It was purely gratuitous. The deputies were not after them. The attack came as a surprise. It was the very broad hint that the underworld declines to be considered down and out, and is still for war.

Hamilton Holt has been lecturing hereabouts. He frankly favors a League of Nations with the United States as a member.

Mr. Holt is not alone in this opinion. And he is not the advocate of a hopeless cause.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

Sometimes it pays to buy a pig in a poke. It depends somewhat on the pig and somewhat on the poke. Anyhow, sometimes one must buy that way if one wants a pig.

These moral reflections were brought about by the statement of Abie, the well known clothing dealer. For ten years Abie has been flourishing like a cabbage in a southern city. His prosperity has been phenomenal, but with each extra figure on the right side of the ledger Abie's health grew a little worse. He consulted all the local talent and took all the local pills. Then some one told him of a wonderful doctor in Baltimore.

"He looked at me," said Abie, "just once. Then he said: 'Every morning lie on your back and lift your legs ten times in the air. By and by lift them fifty times in the air. Twenty-five dollars.'"

Abie paid with outcries. He felt and said that he had been grossly mistreated. The doctor had not looked at his tongue, felt his pulse, thumbed him in the chest or listened between his shoulder blades. Abie had become used to this ritual and he liked it.

"Just twenty-five dollars I am out," said Abie.

But his wife held that since he had paid his money he might as well obey. Arguments were the more heated because Abie's temper was becoming more venomous as the days went on. He yielded to his wife's advice because his own business judgment told him to take what he paid for.

"No—look at me," said Abie.

Front straight as a board. Eyes bright. Tongue as free from a coat as a snake. None of that early morning heaviness that is apt to hang over into the afternoon. Abie's lifting 'em one hundred times a morning now.

"Temper?" asked Abie. "Ain't got it no more. My wife says I am sweet like a young lover."

MAJORS ARE SHY GOOD FIRST BASEMEN

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)
NEW YORK, March 12 (United Press).—In the million dollar shipment of young ball player to get a trial in the major leagues this season is only one first baseman and he is hyphenate.

Jack Bentley, the $65,000 beauty the Giants secured from the Baltimore Orioles, is a first baseman, but he is more of a pitcher and McGraw will hardly take George Kelley off first base to use Bentley.

Since Lu Blue came up with the Detroit Tigers and developed into one of the best first basemen in the game, the crop of good initial backmen has been so poor that Doc Johnston held on for several years in fast company and Doc was long overdue.

Connie Mack picked up Hauser, a youngster who fielded .986 and batted over .300 last season, but Mack apparently isn't satisfied with him, as he said recently he would use Stuffy McInnis if he could get him.

The case of McInnis, by the way, is hard to figure. Three of four clubs could use him well, as regardless of slowed-up limbs he still has a couple of years of good baseball in him, but all the majors passed him when Cleveland asked for waivers.

In place of Stuffy, the Indians will try Brower, a young outfielder from the International League and Guisto, a big fellow who has been warming the bench.

Jim Bottomley, the Card first baseman, is the first good one to come up for several years in the National League and he isn't a sensation. The Reds are going along with Jake Dauberty, one of the oldest players in the league who insists, however, on acting like one of the youngest. Brooklyn is so badly in need of a good guardian at the initial corner that Squape Ebbets grabbed onto Pack Fournier when the Cards decided to get rid of him.

TROJANS, BEARS CLASH ON MAR. 17

LOS ANGELES, March 12.—(A. P.).—Members of the University of Southern California track and field team are slowly rounding into condition, and when they meet the University of California athletes here March 17, the squad will be in tip-top shape, according to Dean E. Cromwell, coach of the Trojans.

Charles W. Paidock, world's champion sprinter, has been in excellent condition for more than two months and on Feb. 17 won the open 100-yard dash in the Southern Pacific Amateur Athletic Union relay carnival in 9.45 second. He is expected to be a big point winner against the Bears.

The Trojans hardly hope to defeat the California track and field aggregation as they have not enough men to win second and third places as well as first, said Cromwell.

The Trojans will not meet the University of Nebraska, according to Gwynn Wilson, graduate manager, who says the Cornhuskers asked for a date on April 7, at Los Angeles. The Trojans were forced to decline the offer because of a meet with Stanford University at Palo Alto on April 3. Wilson said it would be too strenuous on the men to have two meets so close together.

U. S. C. has not decided whether to enter the Pacific Coast championships or the I. C. A. A. A. championships, said Wilson, who declared the Trojans were waiting to see if the Pacific Coast conference changes the date of its meet, in which event the Trojans will enter both meets.

The Trojan schedule for the remainder of the year, announced by Wilson, follows:

March 17, University of California at Los Angeles.
March 24, Stanford University at Los Angeles.
March 31, University of California at Berkeley.
April 3, Stanford University at Palo Alto.
April 14, University of Arizona at Tucson.
April 21, Southern California A. A. U. championship at Redlands.
April 27-28, University of Pennsylvania relay carnival at Philadelphia (tentative).
May 25-26, Pacific Coast conference championships at Pullman, Wash. (tentative).
May 25-26, I. C. A. A. A. championships at Harvard (tentative).
Otto Anderson, hurdler; Oliver Corey and Dick Emmons, high jumpers; Norman Anderson weight thrower are in excellent form for these meets, Coach Cromwell said. Fans are looking forward to a duel between Harold P. Muller, California high jumper and Corey, who was a member of the American Olympic team in 1920.

COLD, NORMAL SAYS EXPERT
SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—(A. P.).—The climate of the west is not changing, in spite of emphatic opinions to the contrary by divers residents of California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Idaho, according to G. H. Wilson, "weather man" for this district.

Mr. Wilson said that although one winter, this one for example, may be slightly more frigid than another, the general trend of the climate, from year to year, is "absolutely the same."

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS
PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATIONS and OTHER CIVIC ORGANIZATIONS OF GLENDALE:

On the first page of the Glendale Daily Press in its issue of Tuesday, March 6, there appeared a report of a meeting held in Los Angeles by the "Legislative Committee" of the California Teachers' Association at which certain resolutions were adopted, the general nature of which was disclosed by conspicuously displayed captions, as follows:

EDUCATORS PROTEST FUND CUT

Legislative Committee of State Teachers Passes
Resolutions

SCHOOLS MENACED

Assert Makes No Provisions for Increased Attendance

The text of the resolutions was prefaced by these explanatory paragraphs:

A meeting adjourned from Saturday, was held by the legislative committee of the California Teachers' association, Southern section, Monday afternoon at the association headquarters in the Loew building, Los Angeles, over which Richardson D. White of this city, committee chairman, presided.

At that session resolutions relative to the school budget prepared by Governor Richardson and now before the state legislature, which had been discussed at the Saturday meeting, were adopted.

The resolutions filled one full column and constitute an assault upon the budget system of controlling appropriations of moneys from the state treasury.

The so-called legislative committee (in plain terms it means lobbyists) claims to represent and speak for 9,500 teachers.

The closing paragraph of the resolutions adopted reads as follows:

"And be it further resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to the governor, to the members of the legislature, parent-teacher associations, boards of education, chambers of commerce, other civic organizations, and the daily press."

It is a strange obsession which possesses these lobbyists that gives them the amazing audacity to appeal to such clubs, organizations and associations as voters in the belief that you will lend aid to this miserable attempt to defeat not only the determination of the governor to put into effect his pledges to the people, but to defeat the action of the people themselves in adopting by an overwhelming majority the budget system. In this connection, it is interesting to note that this brazen effort to public opinion is viewed by others. The following excerpts are taken from a report by Myra Nye published in the Los Angeles Times, Saturday, March 10:

"What of the activities of our educators and our teachers who are entering politics as a class in their relation to good citizenship?" asked Mrs. Frank A. Kelly, vice-president of the Republican study club, yesterday as she led in a discussion of current politics.

"What of their rebellion against measures asked for and endorsed by the people; of their attempts to gain control of the entire educational system, the legislature, the business branches, and indeed the management of the whole matter?"

Mrs. Kelly said she would not hold the club accountable for her sentiments, but that she felt so keenly on the subject she felt impelled to speak. "There are already under way organizations of school teachers which are illegal, dangerous, and opposed to the general welfare."

Mrs. Kelly went on to say that she was glad that as large as the number of teachers were in this organization, an even greater number are loyal, law-abiding citizens.

"A quiet inquiry," she said, "discloses the certainty that the majority of the teachers are as loyal citizens as can be found anywhere, who go their way, say nothing and vote as they please. But for the minority to combine to threaten and attempt to coerce the chief executive of the state and of the legislators of California to accede to their demands is a dangerous procedure."

"When Governor Richardson made public his budget, teachers all over the state, headed by Will C. Wood, enraged at the prospect of a curb upon their extravagance, indulged in a storm of abuse, threats and aspersions which were a discredit to the profession and to the state. The governor was elected by the people under promise to curtail public expenses which threaten the state with bankruptcy. In his budget the schools fare remarkably well. I heard one bright girl teacher say she had taught in the East and been in business there, but nowhere could she see as little work for as much pay as teaching in Los Angeles. Nowhere the world over is there anything like it."

The club drew up resolutions indorsing the stand of Governor Richardson in offering the budget and leading him support in his efforts of economy. This was sent in a telegram to the governor at Sacramento.

In a recent issue of the Los Angeles Times, "The Watchman" made the following interesting and illuminating resume of the political attack on the budget system led by political educators:

"The legislative recess . . . has been greatly enlivened by the political activities of State Superintendent of Public Instruction Will C. Wood. In his attacks on Governor Richardson and the governor's economy budget . . . considerably more than a squabble over reduced appropriations is involved. . . . He is doing all in his power to drag the schools of California into politics and, unfortunately for the boys and girls of California, he is succeeding in certain instances. . . . He is seeking to cripple the new state administration before it begins to function and in his efforts he is being aided by every machine politician and disgruntled taxpayer whom Governor Richardson has separated from the state payroll. . . . It is the apparent intention of Mr. Wood to create a machine of his own, recruited and officered by school teachers, principals and superintendents. He has won discord, suspicion and apprehension throughout the entire state school system. In this propaganda campaign the Richardson budget of state expenditures and undoubtedly has caused a feeling of uncertainty and discontent in the schools as a whole. This he has done despite the fact that Governor Richardson has not proposed the reduction of a single teacher's salary, nor reduced support for a single recognized educational function in any high, intermediate or elementary school in California. More than 60 per cent of the budget is for education and . . . it is the new governor's conviction that every dollar necessary for proper educational facilities in this state should be made available, but that wastefulness and extravagance are unnecessary even for administration of the schools. In the opinion of thousands of parents and the friends generally of education in this state the reduction of a few dollars here and there in school expenditures will prove far less disastrous to the schools than the 'bulldoze' up by Mr. Wood of a powerful clique of pedagogical politicians."

In happy contrast with the menacing resolutions adopted by the lobbyists at their Los Angeles meeting (where at least one of their number was neglecting duties for the special performance of which he draws a handsome salary from public funds raised by taxes paid by citizens of Glendale), Dr. Henry Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Education, one of the foremost educators of the world, in a speech before the Rotary club of Santa Barbara, February 16, said:

"The expenses of government both in the nation and in the state are increasing beyond the ability of the public to support them, and are reflected in similar extravagance of the individual. The government of California has become one of the most expensive on earth, and Governor Richardson, in making this the central issue of his campaign, did a great public service. He made good his pre-election statement by practical action in boldly cutting the present high cost of government and in stopping the policy of indefinite increase in cost."

"There are a great many people who will agree with Governor Richardson in theory who will hesitate to give him their support in the actual performance of his great task. Governor Richardson cannot cut down the expenses of government without cutting off many sources of waste that give salaries to people who would find it hard to earn salaries in the ordinary business of life. It is very difficult to make gentlemen in this situation believe in the need of those economies that cut off their salaries."

At Orange on February 16, James C. Mills, member of the board of regents of the University of California, addressed the Santa Ana Orange Growers' association, and was applauded vigorously by the 4,000 members present. He said in part:

"Governor Richardson is the only governor who has had the courage to put through a real economy budget, one that not only provides sufficient funds for carrying on the essential functions of state government, but also one that deals a deadly blow at non-essential activities. . . . Every essential function would be cared for under his provisions, and also would any emergency through an emergency fund of $700,000. . . ."

"Governor Richardson has done his duty well and it is up to us who put him there to stand by him as loyal Americans."

On the same occasion George H. Hecke, State Horticultural Commissioner, made a public address in which he said:

"While the present appropriation might compel abandonment of non-essential activities of the State Agricultural Department, it would not hamper, but rather would further, the progress of the department by stressing the more important phases of the work. Good, rather than harm, will result from the economy budget."

He declared that agriculturists throughout the state who feared that quarantine inspection or other important workings of the agricultural department might suffer under the slash could rest at ease.

To add a little humor to this serious melange, this dash of spice may be added:

At a luncheon at Sacramento, in honor of the chief executive and members of the legislature, a few days ago, Bishop W. H. Moreland, head of the Sacramento diocese of the Episcopal church, said to the governor, "You are having about as much trouble with the legislature as if you were married to it." Then he added in serious vein:

"ECONOMY IS A BEAUTIFUL THEORY AS LONG AS WE ARE NOT REQUIRED TO PRACTICE IT."

In conclusion, your attention is invited to letters published in the Glendale Daily Press of March 6 and 9, and the Glendale News of March 9, by our fellow-townsmen, R. S. Person and J. C. Sherer.

SOCIAL NEWS OF WASHINGTON

California Delegation is Delaying Return to Its State

(Special Correspondence)
WASHINGTON, March 12.—The sixty-seventh congress has adjourned and the looked-for exodus does not come. The general opinion was that congress was waiting with its grip packed to go somewhere, almost anywhere, away from the Capital, but the town isn't going to be nearly so deserted as rumored. The tired business man in the United States, the President, it is true, left on Monday for a well-earned month of vacation in Florida. The President and Mrs. Harding are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale MacLean on "The Pioneer," a houseboat on the MacLeans chartered for the trip. After a month's rest, the President plans to make a journey across the country, getting acquainted with the people as he has had no time to do so since he has been in office. He will reach California in the late spring.

Not a single member of the California delegation to Washington is packing up his Lanes and Penates to take them back home, for every man was returned to the sixty-eighth congress who served in the sixty-seventh. This is unusual for states outside the solid south where the foremost educators of the world, in a speech before the Rotary club of Santa Barbara, February 16, said:

Of the other Californians, Senator Hiram Johnson has the most definite idea of what he's going to do. He's going abroad, he and Mrs. Johnson. They are sailing March 10. They have engaged a palatial suite on "The George Washington," the ship that carried ex-President Wilson on his trips to the peace conference. The Johnsons will be gone several months. No, they aren't going to investigate or officially observe, they say, or even to gather material for a book. They are going to see the world, and to see the world as it is. They disavow any desire to get data to use before some future senatorial committee. They are going just to rest and play. Their one delightful aim will be just to enjoy life. The plan is regarded among Senator Johnson's brethren in the upper house as radical to a degree, if not actually revolutionary. They are not going to expel him from the union—union of friends of the people—if he flouts senatorial traveling rules in such a frivolous fashion. The elaborate innocence of the plan makes them view it with alarm, and they good-naturedly chafe the senator on "what he is up to now."

The Johnsons don't seem quite clear just when they will return, and whether when they do come back they will head out to their home in California, or to their other home in Maryland. For soon after he entered the senate, Mr. Johnson bought a lovely old place at Riverside, a few miles outside the District of Columbia, in Maryland. It was one of the aristocratic country seats of the famous old Calvert family, of which Cecil Calvert—Lord Baltimore—was the founder in this country and first royal governor of the Maryland colony. In adapting the old house to the requirements of modern life, the Johnsons were careful not to mar the ancient beauty and exclusive atmosphere of the estate. It is a beautiful place, with a big house, all too rare, that has that charm. It makes a beautiful setting for entertaining friends, since it is within easy motoring distance of Washington. The senator motors in to the Capitol on working days, and when there is any interesting debate on, Mrs. Johnson going in with him. She is said to know her husband's business almost as well as he, and she is said to be a very close friend of his. Her special crown—and it seemed to Washington rather than an amazing friendship—used to be Mrs. Philander Chase Knox, wife of the late senator from Pennsylvania, secretary of state under Taft. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Knox used to give occasional receptions together, frequently in the Knox home, which was more accessible than Mrs. Johnson's country seat. The two women would not have seemed congenial—their education, family traditions, point of view, would seem to have been far apart, but they were the best of friends.

Senator Samuel Shortridge is a newcomer in Washington. He lives at the Wardman Park, a huge caravansary that houses more than a thousand people, including half of the cabinet. There's always something doing there and Senator Shortridge is much sought after socially. Evidently he likes parties, though he doesn't look the part, and sit around solemnly at "em. His present plans indicate that he'll stick around Washington for a while.

Some congressmen are glad to get away, if only from the railway of their friends about the rail track on a local place of chance where congressmen were at first reported to have been found by the raiders. This was later emphatically denied, but since no one knows, many are in for amused comments. The affair is reminiscent of a delicious morsel of gossip some time back concerning a far-western, but not California senator, who had a party with a statuette and bead-adorned lady connected with a successful musical comedy. The lady took bichloride after the party broke up and spent the next few days giving out front-page interviews from her hospital. The senator's name was withheld, so the whole Pacific

NEW FLINTRIDGE SCHOOL NEARING COMPLETION

DESIGNED BY MYRON HUNT

Homeseekers who like to combine business with pleasure will be interested in the announcement just made by the management of Flintridge that the famous scenic road, Highland drive, is at last repaved and is again open to the public. This road, though one of the shortest in the Flintridge area, is widely known for its beauty and for the amazing mountain vistas and valley panoramas it presents at every turning.

The model country home at Flintridge continues to attract hundreds of people to this picturesque region. Nearly 1000 people inspected the house during the week. People are invariably amazed at the complete furnishing of this house has been carried. No one who is furnishing a house of his own or expects to during the coming year can fail to gather many valuable ideas and suggestions from a visit to Flintridge while the model house is still open for inspection. The management of Flintridge announces the approaching completion of several interesting new houses which have been constructed during recent months. These houses were planned by the Flintridge management in anticipation of the heavy demand at this season of the year for attractive homes ready for occupancy. These new residences range in price from $7500 to $50,000. For the present they are being listed at contractor's prices, plus the cost of the site.

The interesting feature of the present activity at Flintridge is that by far the greater number of sales are being made to permanent residents of Southern California rather than to people who have planned eventually living in Flintridge are realizing that no time is to be lost if they are to avoid disappointment. Even though it may not be feasible to build at once, they are deciding at the time to select their homesites while original prices still prevail and while the most desirable locations are still available.

coast came in for general speculation in regard to it.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover isn't going away, now that congress, has adjourned. He'd like to, but he's too busy. There's a big international social conference scheduled for Washington in May, and Secretary Hoover is knee-deep in it. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover are admittedly among the most interesting people in official life. Their charming home is a rendezvous for Californians passing through Washington. Recently, Dr. and Mrs. Ray Lyman Wilbur of Leland Stanford have been visiting them, and last week Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Merritt, also of California, were their guests. The Adolph Caspar Miller (Mr. Miller is of the Federal reserve board) are next door neighbors to the Hoovers. Mr. Miller is a Californian born and bred, and the family will go out home to California for the summer as they always do. They were particular friends of the late Franklin Lane, another distinguished Californian. Mrs. Lane has recently gone west with her daughter, Nancy, and their young grandson, Franklin Lane Kauffmann, to Berkeley, California, and it is said that Nancy will bring suit for divorce while they are on the coast. She was the most courted girl of her year, married in 1918, when she was just short of eighteen, at the end of her first season.

Thomas was not the brightest specimen on earth, and try as he might, he could not succeed in obtaining a situation.

At last a bright idea occurred to him. He would offer his services free for two weeks.

On these terms Ike Fingelstein engaged him.

The two weeks having expired, Thomas asked for a "rise."

"Vat is your present salary," asked Fingelstein, said Thomas.

"Nothing sir," said Thomas.

Mr. Fingelstein contemplated the lad. "Vell, my boy, your wages is doubled."

And Thomas was quite satisfied until he had had time to think over the generous offer.

HIGH FACULTY IS BUSY PREPARING VAUDEVILLE

Proceeds to Go to Revolving Scholarship Fund of School

Members of the teaching staff of Glendale high are busy on the sidelines preparing for the faculty vaudeville to be given about March 23.

Harold Brewster has charge of the dramatic end, and Mrs. Dora Gibson of the music.

While the program has not been worked out in its entirety, it is known that Miss Corry is to put on a silhouette act.

The men of the faculty are working on a burlesque of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" (Robert Service), written by Mr. Brewster. The one-act "Playgoers" will also be put on with a faculty cast.

Leland Bruce (the stage name of one of the faculty members) will present a single act skit entitled, "The Station Master," an act which he has also agreed to give at the Long Beach faculty vaudeville.

It is understood that the proceeds of the entertainment will go to the revolving scholarship fund of the school.

CITY BUYS TRACTOR
A Fordson tractor and a trailer-mobility have just been purchased by P. Dederich of the city's public service department, for use in handling pipe, poles and other material necessary for the operation of that department.

This will give the city the use of the equivalent of a 5-ton truck, while at the same time the tractor may be disconnected from the trailer and used for other city work.

Even when work is scarce you will find it everywhere.

BALLOONS

The little boy stood with a tear on his cheek And a woe in his heart that his words could not speak;

A sob in his throat and an ache in his heart And tears that afresh from his eyelids would start. "Now what is the matter?" I asked him and he Looked up with a woe-stricken visage to me, And he said, as if he did not quite understand: "See how my balloon busted right in my hand!"

And then I remembered myself as a lad And how many times in my boyhood I had Such gaudy balloons that were held with a string And how much of joy to my heart they would bring.

And then something happened—I don't know just what,

But my red toy balloon disappeared on the spot. A pop and a crack and a puff where it broke And left not so much as a trail of white smoke.

And often since then I have held by a string Something just as bright that I felt sure would bring Me fame, place or riches, and Oh it was fair As it danced and it floated so lightly on air. And then something happened, the oil well went dry, Or the patent right failed or the seller was sly Who sold me the stock—I did not understand, But my toy balloon burst right there in my hand.

Yes, we're all much alike in the things that we prize, In the aches in the heart and the tears in the eyes, In the visions we have and the hopes and the joys And the keen disappointments we're very much boys. All glowing with color and graceful and fair These hopes of ours rise up and dance on the air, Till like that sad youngster above there we stand, Another balloon burst right in our hand.

HOW TO ACQUIRE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD

"We study dogmatics in the seminary," said Dr. H. C. Funk yesterday at the Lutheran church. "Now dogmatic treatments are valuable exercises for the brain; but feeling, as we have defined it, is a safer guide than philosophy, and much easier to understand. Religion, then, is not so much a philosophy as it is an application of the principles of philosophy; acting upon our lives in the present state or plane of our experience; adapted to every phase of life, and reaching us right where we live. That is why we sing, 'Just as I am—Thou wilt receive, wilt welcome, pardon, cleanse, relieve.'"

"Permit me but briefly to touch upon the love impulse, for love is the most beautiful thing in the world. When some one gives a glowing account of a noble deed of heroism we feel a similar impulse arising within our own hearts. An appeal for human suffering will cause a sympathetic chord to vibrate, and the heart is moved with a desire to do something to alleviate the suffering, to help those who are in distress.

"No man need be ashamed to shed tears of sympathy at the foot of the Cross of Him who suffered for us. Paul, the greatest theologian, said, 'Be kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven us.'"

"Again, love or charity is not puffing; it is patient, 'endureth all things.' Indeed, in its concern for others it may be entirely unselfish of itself. Whyte, one of the best friends I ever had, was a scholarly gentleman, but he often neglected himself and his own interest in his concern for others. The eye, you know, is very quick and wonderfully discerning, but it cannot see itself. Love is very much like that. And, highest among these love impulses we find maternal affection, for there is no other impulse so nearly like the love of God.

"For the love of God is broader than the measures of man's mind, And the heart of the Eternal Is most wonderfully kind."
